No Natural Gas For This Year.

The committee from the Carlisle Commercial Club to induce the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Company to extend their pipe lines to Carlisle have received a communication from the General Management of the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Company, Captain John Tonkin, of Oil City, Pa., stating that the lines would not be extended to Paris for about one year and the matter of extending the lines to Carlisle could not be considered until the lines were extended to Paris.

Big Cattle Market.

At Mt. Sterling, Monday, (court day) big run of cattle, fully 3,000 head. The quality was fair and trade good. The best feeding cattle sold at 4 1/2 cents with light weight stuff at 3 1/2 to 4 cents. Yearlings at $4.25 to $4.50. Heifers at 3 1/2 to 4 cents, the latter price for fat stuff. Cows at 3 to 3 1/2 cents. Bulls 3 to 3 1/2. About 1,000 sheep on the market and the prices asked were from $5 to $6 per head.

Attention, Tobacco Growers.

Big Acreage; Small Yield.

Mr. M. J. Farris, of near Danville, Ky., has just completed the threshing of his wheat crop for 1907 which he cut from 600 acres of land and the total amount is 9,000 bushels. Mr. Farris was much disappointed, for he fully expected to realize 12,000 bushels from this amount of acreage. The land is worth $100 per acre on which the entire crop was raised.

The date of the big show "In Old Yarrow" has been changed from Monday 5th to Wednesday 7th. 30-2t

Two Special Premiums Worth Going After.

On page 51 of the catalog of the Bourbon County Agricultural Society will be found a special premium offered by The Kauffman Buggy Co., through its representatives in Paris, Yerkes & Kenney, of $20.00 for the best harness horse, gelding or mare, driven to a Kauffman vehicle purchased of Yerkes & Kenney, and $10.00 for second premium.

On page 57 of the catalog, you will also find a special premium of $20.00 offered by H. H. Babcock Co., through their agency, Yerkes & Kenney, for the best harness horse, gelding or mare, driven to a Babcock vehicle, bought of Yerkes & Kenney, and $10.00 for second premium.

The above specials are liberal and shows the interest taken in the Bourbon Fair by this enterprising young firm of Yerkes & Kenney, dealers in fine vehicles, farm implements, feed, grain, seeds, coal and salt.

The amount of the premiums are well worth trying for, as they would knock a nice sum off the cost of one of these excellent vehicles. There are none better made. Call on these gentlemen at R. J. Neely's old stand, corner Fourth and Pleasant and they will take pleasure in showing you the finest line of fine vehicles ever seen in Paris.

Catholic Picnic Grand Success.

The picnic given Wednesday at the Bourbon County Fair Grounds by the young people of the church of the Annunciation was largely attended and a grand success from both social and financial standpoints.

Saxon's orchestra of Lexington, furnished music for the occasion, while dancing, swimming, foot races and target shooting made up the pleasures of the day. Among those from a distance who attended, were Misses Marguerite and Lillie McCauliff, of Jeffersonville, Ind., guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Burke; Mrs. William Hunt and son, Mr. Bowen Hunt, of Lexington, guests of the former's father, Mr. Mike Holleran, Mrs. Thomas Coen and daughter, Miss Mary Coen, of Louisville, guests of Miss M. A. McCarthy; Mrs. Green, of Richmond, guest of Mrs. Ed Keller; Mrs. Horn, of St. Louis, Mo., guest of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Santen; Miss Marguerite Collins, of Lexington, guest of Miss Marguerite Blake of near Centerville; Miss Bessie O'Connor, of Newport, guest of Miss Nellie Schwartz; Miss Theresa McCann, of Georgetown, guest of Rev. Father Cusack; Mrs. B. Kenney and son, Matser Albert Kenney, and daughter, Miss Annie Kenney, who are enroute to Mt. Sterling to visit Mrs. Kenney's mother, Mrs. Sallie Holland; Miss Nellie Shannon, of Millersburg, Grace Gleason and Mary Caden, of Georgetown, and Mrs. Herman Higgs, of Millersburg.

The prizes offered in the different contests were won by the following:

Ladies hat, won by Mrs. Ed. Burke; mirror won by E. L. Harris; picture, won by Duncan Bell; picture, won by Tom Roche; doll, won by Miss Lavin; Swing, won by Wm. Sager; shoes, won by Earl Swearingen; rocking chair, won by Will Grosche; pair of bronze statues, won by P. I. McCarthy; cut glass pitcher, won by Louis Fee.

Ball game—Lexington 8, Paris 7; thirteen innings.

One hundred yard dash for boys 15 years, J. Wetherall; 100 yard dash for boys 10 years, Baldwin Woods; 100 yard dash for boys 12 years, Ed. Fitzgerald; sack race, Jas. Cain; one-legged race, Earl Blake; long distance throwing, for ladies, Mrs. George Brown.

Estimable Woman Dies.

Mrs. Malinda Mink, who resided near Avon, Fayette county, died Sunday of general debility, aged 67 years. Mrs. Mink had been twice married, her first husband being Edward Edwards, by whom she has one son, Everett Edwards, of near Paris. She is survived by her second husband and four children. The funeral services took place from the residence Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, services by the Rev. Dr. George Varden, of this city. The interment at Paris cemetery.

Judge Beckner Payalyzed.

Judge W. M. Beckner, of Winchester, suffered a slight stroke of paralysis Tuesday morning. Judge Beckner went to his office and complained of not feeling well.

As he was in front of the Brown-Proctoria Hotel in Winchester, he was seen to grasp one of the pillars of the porch as if about to fall. Several of his friends rushed to his assistance and he was taken home.

It was found that he had lost the use of his tongue and one leg.

The last reports from his bedside say that he has recovered the use of his tongue and is some better.

Gone To Her Award.

Sister Gonzaga, one of the founders of St. Joseph's Hospital in Lexington, and who began her fifty years' service as a Sister of Charity in Louisville, died at St. Joseph's Hospital Monday night, after an illness of about five months. The body was taken to Nazareth convent, in Nelson county, Tuesday for the funeral and interment. She was before joining the sisterhood Miss Nora O'Keefe and has a sister, Mrs. Kate Broderick, who lives in Louisville. She had early turned her attention to nursing railroad men, having taken up this branch of work in Louisville, and for many years she had charge of the railroad room at St. Joseph's at Lexington.

Vacates The Bench.

Judge James E. Robbins declined to preside over the fourth trial of Caleb Powers and in a lengthy written opinion delivered from the bench at 10 o'clock yesterday morning sustained the motion of the defense that he vacate the bench.

This action will of necessity cause further delay in the trial and it will now be incumbent upon Governor Beckham to appoint another special Judge to try the case.

The defense submitted a list of 20 names to the other side, but the Commonwealth rejected all and refused to submit any of their own. It is not known when the case will be resumed.

Among the names submitted by the defense were Judge Watts Parker and Judge J. D. Hunt, of Lexington.

"Tallow Dick" Killed.

While walking a trestle near Georgetown, whither he had been summoned as a witness in the Powers case, "Tallow Dick" Combs, colored barber-feudist, was run down and killed by a train. In addition to being implicated in the Goebel murder cases, Combs was a figure in the notorious French-Eversole feud.

The Jewell Kelley Stock Co.

The Jewell Kelley Stock Co. is playing nightly at the Grand to only fair houses, nothing like the crowds they deserve. This is undoubtedly the best popular priced company that has ever played in Paris Grand. They are here tonight in "Sign of the Four," and tomorrow afternoon in matinee, "Prince and Pauper," and close their engagement Saturday night with "Ku Klux Klan."

These are three of their best plays and you will not regret going to see them.

Desirable Lot—A Bargain.

If you want to buy a desirable lot, within a few minutes walk of the court house or depot, for the small sum of $200 you had better see about it at once by calling up or at this office. 23-tf

"In Old Yarrow."

On Wednesday evening, August 7th, the ladies of the Paris Hospital League will present a local talent play entitled "In Old Yarrow," a college musical comedy in three acts.

The scene is laid in a college fraternity house. Time: the present. The second act will present an elaborate ball room scene, with belles and beaux in evening dress. The story, like a college play, has the inevitable foot ball game and hero, but the plot does not center on foot ball. It is the story of hero worship, jealousy, a man's weakness, a mistake, and intense love. There will be songs by individual members of the company and by the whole troupe. The following will be in the cast:

Messrs. Carl Wilmoth, Albert Einton, C. W. Turner, Clay Sutherland, Charles Fithian, John Davis, Withers Davis, Emmett Redmon, White Varden, Oscar Hinton, Thos. Funk, Harry Kerslake, Misses Mary Ashbrook, Sarah Daniels, Helen Hutchcraft, Elizabeth Steele, Louise Grimm, Belle Horton, Mrs. Denis Dundon, Belle White Forman and Mrs. E. L. Stevens. This should be made the social event of the season. A mere glance at the names of the performers assures the people of something good. Give these young people a crowded house, for they deserve it, and then too, remember you are helping to build the Paris Hospital when you attend.

Judge Hargis Resigns.

Judge James Hargis resigned from the State Central Committee Tuesday night. He wrote out his resignation and addressed it to Chairman Louis McQuown after he returned to Lexington from Frankfort, where he had been to attend a meeting of the committee for the first time in a year. Judge Hargis' reasons for tendering his resignation at this time are given in the following letter:

Lexington, Ky., July 30, 1907.
"To Hon. Louis McQuown, Chairman Democratic State Central Committee:

"Dear Sir:—I have held the position of member of the State Central Committee from the Tenth District for nine years without objection from any Democrat who has never bolted. A few hostile newspapers have demanded my resignation but I did not get my commission from them nor was I obligated to obey their orders. I have for a long time, however, felt that I should quit politics and give my entire time to my personal business, and now that forty-seven out of forty-eight men have pronounced me innocent of the foul charges laid against me and no criminal charge can be sprung in any quarter, I feel that the time has come when I can resign with credit to myself and to the party I have served with faithfulness and devotion. I therefore tender my resignation as aforesaid, promising to continue to labor for the party I love, and endeavor to get others to do so. I want to see our admirable ticket elected from top to bottom and all in my power will be done to that end. Let every Democrat do likewise and we will return to the old-time majority.
(Signed) "JAMES HARGIS."

What The Country Press Is Doing.

The Somerset Republican, published at the home of Napier Adams, the Republican nominee for Clerk of Court of Appeals, and which announced at the time of his selection that his name could not go at its mast head together with those of the other nominees because its editor, and many good people of Pulaski county, did not deem him worthy of support, continues its exposures. The issues of the paper of July 13th last denounces Adams as the "tattooed man" of Eleventh District politics, a "conscienceless political trickster," and says that the Republican ticket will lose thousands of old line Republican votes if he is not taken from among the nominees of the party.

In an editorial headed "No Fair Thing in Tattooed man," the paper has the following:

"We think no true Republican can afford to vote to put a man into the important office of the Court of Appeals who is tattooed all over with unfairness, lawlessness, fraud and corruption.

"The Clerk of Court of Appeals is an ex-officio member of the State Election Board. He is one of the three who counts the votes and certifies of elections. What force has our plea for 'free ballot and a fair count' or 'a square deal to every man while we have a man on the ticket, if elected would have to count the vote, and who uses the same foul and unfair means that were employed in the worst day of Goebellism.

"We old-fashioned Republicans of Pulaski, and other mountain counties, do not propose to foist upon the people of this State a man to count the people's votes who has made history that proves that he does not think it as great crime to steal an office and votes as to filch goods, wares, or merchandise. For we can see no fair thing in a tattooed man.

"And we are expecting that the Republican ticket will lose thousands of old line Republicans if he is not taken from the ticket and in his place a man put in whom the people can confide as one who will give 'a fair count' as Election Commissioner, to every man.

"Hoary-headed Republicans by the thousand will rebuke the effort to insult them by an attempt to cram a candidate down their throat who is a conscienceless political trickster who has no sense of fairness even toward his Republican brethren.

The country newspapers of Kentucky, Democratic and Independent, are rendering splendid service to the Democratic party this early in the campaign. Their editors are displaying keen interest in public affairs of the State, as well as of their immediate section, and show by their editorial utterances that they thoroughly appreciate what the Democratic party, through its officials in office for the past seven years, has accomplished for the good of the Commonwealth and the betterment of its various institutions.

The following from the Lyon County Herald is a fair sample of the general expression regarding the splendid ticket placed in the field by the party to be voted for in the coming November election:

"The school per capita is more than a dollar greater now than under Republican rule in Kentucky. The State is out of debt, has nearly completed a new capitol with little cost to the tax payers, and peace, prosperity and happiness prevails. Is there any excuse for the independent voter to seek further than the splendid ticket that heads this column? There is but one answer, and there is every assurance that it will be elected by old-time majority."

did a dozen years ago, a people before whom Democratic orators had not gone, he will find a people who have been reached through the Democratic press, and will find them conversant with State affairs and with the good record which Democratic officials have made in seven years past.

Notable among these Democratic papers, whose every issue these days deals with public affairs, are the Somerset Journal, the Campton Courier, the Ashland Independent, the Catlettsburg Democrat, the Hazeli Green Herald, the Estill County Herald, the Big Sandy News, Frenchburg Agitator, Morgan County News, Mt. Vernon Signal, and the Montgomery, Clark, Madison and Bath county papers. The knowledge of public affairs exhibited by the eastern Kentucky editors in their discussion is well shown in a recent issue of the Campton Courier, published in Wolfe county. In an editorial that paper has the following:

"The Republican press in this State is howling 'Goebellism'. No Democrat is ashamed of the record of the martyred Goebel, and his life and work will, when history become truth, be the brightest pages in Kentucky history. The freeing Kentucky from the political domination of the L. & N. railroad should, of itself, endear him to every Kentuckian. We do not shrink the issue if it is put on the ground. Will the Republicans stand for Taylor and his bloody deed?"

And yet, notwithstanding that the present Democratic Administration has rescued the State from the terrible condition that the Republicans left it, by putting the prisons on a paying basis by wiping out the State debt, by increasing the school term and increasing the pay of the teachers, by throttling the book trust and compelling it to decrease the price of school books, by building a new State capitol, and by lowering the taxes in the meantime, and in spite of the fact that the Republican party by practical test has proven its utter inability to give Kentucky good government, the Louisville Herald says, in speaking of the "redemption" of the State: "Her one hope is deliverance by the Republican party. That party alone has the strength and faculty to accomplish the task."

There is not a State in the Union that is as well governed as Kentucky. There is not one with a clearer, genuine business-like administration. And knowing this the Herald wants the people to "turn 'er loose." Wants the State turned loose from safe, economical, business-like management to a party that has not and can not come in a mile of the present method of management. If you had hired a man to attend to your affairs and he had bankrupted you, and you had then discharged him and hired another who had brought order out of chaos and had made your business better than it was before you had bankrupted, would you then discharge the latter named man and give your affairs over to the one who had failed, just because he wanted the salary? You would not. Yet this is what the Republicans are asking you to do. They tried and failed, and the Democrats succeeded and have made the State one of the best in the Union. And now the Republicans, because they want salaries, ask that you give them charge again, or an endorsement of their failure. But you won't.

CONSUMPTION'S WARNING

Inside facts soon become evident in outside symptoms.—DR. G. G. GREEN.

The aid of scientific inventions is not needed to determine whether your lungs are affected. The first symptoms can be readily noted by anyone of average intelligence.

There is no disease known that gives so many plain warnings of its approach as consumption, and no serious disease that can be so quickly reached and checked, if the medicine used is Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which is made to cure consumption.

It is in the early stages that German Syrup should be taken, when warnings are given in the cough that won't quit, the congestion of the bronchial tubes and the gradual weakening of the lungs, accompanied by frequent expectoration.

But no matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has already attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble.

The MOUTHS OF BABES.

By TROY ALLISON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"I'd like to come over there," said a small feminine voice somewhere from the neighborhood of the hedge-row.

Drayton, sitting on his garden bench with a newspaper and a cigar, turned toward the hedge that separated the two gardens and located his visitor. She was evidently standing on something high enough to enable her to overlook the adjoining territory.

Drayton went over to the hedge and looked down into some exceedingly blue eyes, surrounded by a fluff of yellow hair, surmounted by a still fluffier blue bow.

"Hello!" he said, looking down from his six foot height. "Where did you come from?"

"I've been here often and peeped through," she confided. "Lift me over," she commanded in the tone of one accustomed to being obeyed, holding out her arms.

He lifted her over to his side of the hedge, and she ran directly to his rustic seat.

"I'm not prepared to entertain ladies," he stood with his hands in his pockets and smiled into her upturned face. "What can I offer you, madam?"

"I'll take chocolate, please." She settled her skirts over her chubby little legs and smiled back ingratiatingly. Drayton looked dubious.

"Er—I'm sorry to say the chocolate is all out. Wouldn't grapes do?" he suggested.

"Yes; I dess dwapes will do very nicely, thank you." And Drayton imagined she was probably giving a very good imitation of her mother's manner.

When he returned from the house with a bunch of grapes and a huge peach, he found that she had filled her lap with his choicest roses and was hugging them to her face.

"I'm doing to live here always. I'm doing to marry you," she announced. Drayton, thirty-six and a bachelor, actually felt his face turn red.

"Er—when?" he asked feebly. "Just as soon as you can det the be-dagament ring."

"Of course, of course, anything you say, but what might be the name of my future wife?"

"Louise. It's mamma's name too." "It would be lovely to have a wife named Louise, but you wouldn't like my house, little girl. It's full of pipes and things."

"I could stay out in the darden with the roses, and you could bring an umbrella and hold it over me when it rained," she suggested resourcefully.

"That would certainly be unique. I see you would be able to plan things like a real housewife should, but do you think you could stand the pipes?"

"You could keep all your pipes in one room, and I could have a little blue and white room and not have any pipes, couldn't I? I never have any pipes in my room."

"That's the scheme. We'll plan that blue and white room right away," he agreed heartily.

His housekeeper was surprised when the paperhangers came next day and did the south room in blue. She was still more surprised when the van drove up with all the furnishings for a dainty little bedroom. She felt hurt, considering how long she had been in his service. It was a special slight for Drayton not to tell her, first of all, that he intended to be married.

But Drayton, following a whim, was fitting up the room according to the child's fancy.

Late one afternoon he strolled down the garden path and found little Louise waiting for him to lift her over the hedge.

"Your blue room is all finished, little wife," he said, tossing her in the air, to her great delight. "It's ready for you to look at. I told the housekeeper a young lady was going to visit her this afternoon."

"Are there blue roses on the wall?" she asked eagerly.

"Bushels of them—and little white frilly curtains, and a dear little white bed—and fairy tale pictures on the wall."

"Oo—oo—but I certainly do love you." She clung to his fingers as they walked toward the house. "Did you det the Sleeping Beauty picture?"

"Yes—and Princess Goldilocks—it's a grand room, all right."

"Well, I'll marry you the first thing tomorrow, and nurse can send over all my dolls and things."

"Isn't this rather—sudden? Perhaps your mother would prefer your waiting until you are a week or so older?"

"No, indeed," airily. "Mamma lets me do anything I want—that is, most anything."

"But she'll miss you, and your papa will miss you."

"Oh, didn't you know? I haven't had any faver for a long time—most 'leven years, nearly."

Drayton took in the five-year-old dignity of her in an amused glance.

"But if you haven't any papa I'm sure your mamma will get very lonely if you marry so young."

"But I'm going to bring her over here to live, too—and nurse, and doggie, and my canary, and my white kitty."

"Jove! I'll have to add a wing to the house, sure as we're living! I'm afraid, little one, we'll have to postpone our marriage until I can have a few more rooms built. You'll not mind, will you, sweetheart?"

"Not if you bring me some more caramels like the ones you brought me yesterday," seriously.

She was silent a moment, evidently evolving a new thought.

"I have such a lovely plan," she gurgled. "I've decided not to be your wife. I'd rather have a faver. It's been such a long time since I had any faver."

Drayton caught her up in his arms. "Sweetheart, you are the dearest little girl a father ever had," and his eyes were moist.

When the room had been admired, and the picture of Princess Goldilocks kissed fervently, and the housekeeper had given her a cream puff, they went back to the garden.

A slender girl in the other garden ran to the dividing hedge.

"Oh, Louise, mamma has been so very uneasy about you! Where have you been, dearie?"

"I'm afraid it's my fault," Drayton said contritely. "I took her to look at some pictures, and we forgot the time."

The child held on to his fingers impulsively. "Oh, mamma, this is my new papa. You are doing to marry him at once, and we are going to live in his house. You know you said his garden was ever so much prettier than ours."

The woman's face, vivid crimson, looked into the embarrassed face of her neighbor. Finally a twinkle came into her eyes, and a dimple wavered near the corner of her mouth.

He saw the twinkle and thought it and the dimple the most fascinating combination he had ever seen.

"I'd be glad to come over and arrange the details with you at your earliest convenience," he suggested audaciously.

"Mamma, do marry him, please—please do!" begged the child. "Mamma, he'll bring you lovely caramels."

"Will you really?" the mother laughed.

"Pounds of 'em!" emphatically. "May I come over soon and get acquainted?" he begged.

She looked at his well cut features and saw the frank admiration in his eyes.

"I suppose it's proper, Mr. Drayton. You see, I know your sister."

"Then I'm coming over this evening and sit on your front porch. If you know my sister, you'd be greatly lacking in hospitality if you didn't let me call."

"I would hate to seem inhospitable." There was a note of shyness in her voice.

He reached over the hedge and put the child in her mother's arms. She put her plump little arms around his neck in an overflow of affection.

"Goodby, faver," she said, and as the mother went toward the house in the gathering twilight she was suddenly conscious of the loveliness of the rose garden and the scent of the roses in the air and that in her heart there was a tiny new feeling, warm and tender.

Longest Year on Record.
The year B. C. 46, by order of Julius Caesar, the then reigning Roman emperor, contained 445 days. To clear away all the confusion which had previously existed in reconciling the lunar with the solar year, Caesar, with the help of Sosigenes, an Alexandrian astronomer, undertook a thorough reform of the calendar. He effected it by making the year now called 46 B. C. "the year of confusion," consist of 445 days and the succeeding years of 365 days, with the exception of every fourth year, which was to consist of 366. This method is called the Julian calendar.

The number of days in the months from January to December before Caesar's time had been respectively 29, 28, 31, 29, 31, 29, 31, 29, 31, 29, 29. These numbers Caesar changed to 31 and 30 alternately, with the exception of February, which was to have 29 in ordinary years and 30 in leap years.

In honor of himself he changed to July the name of the month that followed June. The pontiffs in applying the Julian calendar went wrong by inserting leap year every three years instead of every four years, and this continued till the year now called 8 B. C., when the Emperor Augustus ordained there should be no leap year for twelve years, which made leap year occur in 4 A. D. At the same time Augustus gave his own name to the month following July, adding one day to it, which he took away from February.

Character in the Eyebrows.
An arched eyebrow does not indicate the highest order of intelligence, but is expressive of great sensibility. Scant growth of the eyebrows denotes lack of vitality. On the contrary, heavy, thick eyebrows indicate a strong constitution and great physical endurance. They are not beautiful on a woman's face, however much they may signify either mental or bodily vigor, and when they are not only heavy, but droop and meet at the nose, they are disagreeable and are said to accompany an insincere and prying nature. Long, drooping eyebrows, lying wide apart, indicate an amiable disposition. Where the eyebrows are lighter in color than the hair the indications are lack of vitality and great sensitiveness.

Faintly defined eyebrows placed high above the nose are signs of indolence and weakness. Very black eyebrows give the face an intense and searching expression. When natural, they accompany a passionate temperament. Very light eyebrows rarely are seen on strongly intellectual faces, although the color of the eyebrows is not accepted simply as denoting lack of intelligence. The form gives the key to the faculties and their direction. Red eyebrows denote great fervor and ambition; brown, a medium between the red and black.—Exchange.

The Meanest Man.
The meanest man has been located in Philadelphia. He dropped a large roll of bills on the street, and a boy who found it returned the money to him. Counting the bundle carefully, the owner put it in his pocket. "My son," he said benignly to the boy, "I am rejoiced to see that you are guided by lofty principles, and as an earnest of my approbation shall refrain from charging you interest for the time you have had my money."

A Continuous Feast.
They were from the country, and a notice in their first visit to London, and a notice in their hotel puzzled them considerably. It ran: "Breakfasts, 8 to 11; lunches, 12 to 2; teas, 3 to 5; dinners, 6 to 8; suppers, 8 to 11." "Say, Garge," said one to the other, "'ordin' to this here, there bea'n't so vary much toime fer soightseein'."—St. James' Gazette.

Advantage of Being a Brute.
"Do you think animals feel pain as deeply as we do?"

"I've never studied the subject, but it is safe to say that they don't worry as much as we do over pains that have not yet been felt."—Chicago Record-Herald.

In our relation with one another we are apt to neglect the little things which count so much in making our lives happier.

An Ingenious Accusation.
"The favorite horse of the Chinese Emperor Tsi," said a Chinese statesman, "died through negligence on the part of the royal master of the horse. The emperor was so enraged at this that he drew his sword and would have run the careless functionary through the body."

"But the learned mandarin, Yen-tse, struck up the emperor's sword, saying: "Sire, this man has not yet been formally accused of any crime. He deserves to die, but his accusation should come first. It is the law."

"Well," said the emperor, "tell me what he has done."

"Listen, you rogue," said the mandarin, turning to the trembling master of the horse—"listen to a catalogue of your heinous offenses. In the first place, you have allowed a horse to perish that his majesty had entrusted to your care. In the second place, it is on your account that the emperor became so exasperated that he was actually on the point of disgracing himself in all his people's eyes by killing a man for the sake of a horse."

"Enough," said the emperor, appreciating the rebuke. "Let him go. He is pardoned."

Breaking It Gently.
"Laura," said Mr. Ferguson as he buttered a biscuit and passed his coffee cup for a second filling, "I don't miss anything, but after I had come in last night, about 11:30, I found the house had been broken into. Somebody had smashed a pane of glass in a basement window, crawled inside and made his way up the stairs to the first floor. There hasn't been anything disturbed in the pantry, the china closet or the sideboard, has there?"

"No," answered Mrs. Ferguson. "But, mercy, who could it have been and what do you suppose he wanted?"

"I suspect," he rejoined, clearing his throat, "that I—er—did it myself and that I wanted to get inside without disturbing anybody. You had all gone to bed, and I had left my latchkey in my other trousers. It will cost about 25 cents to repair the basement window. The weather man, I see, predicts possible showers for today."—Chicago Tribune.

Three Kinds of Lightning.
The Etruscans of old believed that there were three kinds of lightning—one incapable of doing any injury, another more mischievous in its character and consequently only to be issued with the consent of a quorum of twelve gods, and a third carrying mischief in its train and for which a regular decree was required from the highest divinities in the Etruscan skies. Curiously enough, modern scientific men agree with the view that there are three kinds of lightning, but their varieties differ from the Etruscans. The first is known as forked lightning and runs in zigzag lines, the second as sheet lightning, because it is seen in a body, and the third as globe lightning, as it sometimes runs in the shape of a ball. The latter variety is rather slow in moving.

The Word "Nice."
"Nice" is one of the exceptional words which have risen on the scale and improved with age. It is from the Latin "nescius" and originally signified ignorant. To Chaucer it regularly meant foolish—"wise and nothing nice." In Spenser's time it still meant effeminate. From general foolishness there was probably first a specialization to foolish fustiness about trifles. Then the idea of ignorance dropped out, and the word meant particular about details, accurate. It was creditable to be a "nice" observer or to show "nice" judgment. And so in the end the positively agreeable meaning of today was evolved.

A Savage Poison.
The juice of the green pineapple is accredited in Java, the Philippines and throughout the far east generally with being a blood poison of a most deadly nature. It is said to be the substance with which the Malays poison their kreesses and daggers and to be also the "finger nail" poison formerly in use among the aborigine Javanese women almost universally. These women cultivate a nail on each hand to a long, sharp point, and the least scratch from one of these was certain death.

THE FREEZING PROCESS.

Why It Is That Ice at Times Will Crack or Burst.

Ice never bursts from freezing. As soon as the liquid of which it is composed is frozen solid expansion ceases. The cracking or bursting of ice is brought about in this way: When water is subjected to extreme cold ice crystals will gradually form on its surface until the same are covered with a thin coat of what appears to be wet snow. From this outer coating of ice crystals all subsequent freezing goes downward, the ice thickening according to the degree of cold. The water which is being converted into ice now begins to expand, creating a pressure upon the unfrozen water below. This pressure is both downward and outward, and in case the water under observation is in a vessel the sides and bottom of the receptacle supply the resistance.

As the freezing process continues the pressure upon the confined water and air in the interior of the bulk increases until something yields. If the vessel be stronger than the ice stratum that has formed over the surface the layer of ice will be bent upward at the center, that being the weakest point, on account of the fact that the outer edges of the congealed mass are frozen fast to the sides of the vessel in which the experiment is being made. In this condition the center of the ice continues to rise or bulge until it bursts from the resistance of the water below. Could the vessel be tapped from below and the water drawn off no amount of freezing would be sufficient to crack or bulge the ice layer on the surface.

THE "GWEED NEEBORS."

A Belief in Fairies Still Exists in Parts of Scotland.

There still lingers a widespread belief in the north of Scotland that the "fair folk," or "gweed neebors," as the fairies are called, still live in the hills, and during the first days of convalescence a mother must be zealously guarded lest one of the "wee people" come and rob the child of its nourishment. Sometimes they succeed in carrying off the mother. Here is one of the superstitious legends:

A north country fisher had a fine child. One evening a beggar woman entered the hut and went up to the cradle to gaze into the eyes of the babe. From that time good health left it, and a strange look came into its face, and the mother was troubled. An old man begging for food passed that way. When he caught sight of the child he cried:

"That's nae a bairn. It's an image, and the gweed folk has stoun his speerit."

Thereupon he set to work to recall the fisher's bairn. A peat fire was heaped high on the hearth and a black hen held over it at such a distance that it was singed and not killed. After some struggling the hen escaped up the lum. A few moments elapsed, and then the parents were gladdened by the sight of a happy expression once more on the child's face. It threw from that day forward.—Spectator.

It Might Have Been Worse.

Mark Twain, during one of his lecture tours, was waiting at a station for a delayed train. The lecture committee and several townsmen were with him and talking their best to pass the time away. One man told about a frightfully unhealthy town he had read about, and it was a gresome tale of dying and burials and that sort. "It might have been worse," Twain followed, in his slow and direct manner. "I lived in that same town for two years, and I never died once—not a single time." The way he said it seemed to daze the crowd, and not a man said a word in response. "Of course you may think I'm lying," the humorist continued, "and I'm sorry, for I can't get any witnesses to testify that I didn't, because everybody else that lived there is dead."

Germany's Strict Laws.

In no country is the government more strict than in Germany. If a foreigner wishes to remain in a town for some days he must take his passport to the police and receive in exchange for it, together with a sixpenny piece, a permit card, which entitles him to remain there for six months. The passport is pigeonholed. If, however, you desire to change your lodging both you and your landlord must give notice to the police. This system recommends itself not a little, for it prevents pauper immigration. No German is allowed to leave the country unless he can show he has done the military service required of him. If a man is on the point of starting he must delay his departure until he gets a passport showing that he is a free man.

Moisten the Buttonhole.

Every man knows the difficulty and agony of a refractory collar stud. With a breakfast to eat, a train to catch and an appointment to keep, few things are more maddening than the collar which simply will not ally itself to the stud. But few things are so easy to remedy. All that is necessary is to dip the thumb and forefinger in water and slightly moisten the obstinate buttonhole. Then the stud slips in without a murmur.

A Fact.

De Style—Call a man a brick and he feels pleased. Gunbusta—He does. De Style—But call him a hard, red, inanimate, oblongated object and he'll resent it.

At Midnight.

Mamma—Oh, no. Paragoric would not be good for him. Papa—Maybe not, but I think it would be good for the rest of the family.

Willing to Sign Petition.

"I am willing to sign a petition asking the Governor to pardon Caleb Powers," says Perry Rice, a former member of the last trial jury in which Caleb Powers was given the death sentence. Mr. Rice returned from Georgetown Wednesday where he went in response to a summons to make an affidavit in regard to Judge Robbins vacating the bench.

Mr. Rice said he had experienced no change of opinion as to the guilt of Powers, but inasmuch as Judge James Hargis, who had stood charged with being accessory before the fact to the murder of Cockrell, Cox and Marcum, had been permitted to go free, he thought the same treatment should be meted out to Powers, if justice was to have full sway.

Particulars Of Drowning Of Ex-Bourbon John C. Miller.

The following is a special sent to the daily papers of St. Louis from Mankato, Minn., July 27, telling of the drowning of Mr. John C. Miller, formerly of Millersburg, this county:

"John C. Miller, a tailor, living at 5168 Cabanne, St. Louis, and a guest at Point Pleasant, a summer resort on Madison Lake, was drowned yesterday.

"Accompanied by his father-in-law, C. W. Baker, San Antonio, Tex., Miller was fishing across the Lake from the Point and hooked an unusually large fish. In the excitement he tipped the boat over, seventy-five yards from shore. Baker clung to the boat and Miller concluded to attempt to swim ashore. He had gone one-third the distance, when he sank. He called out he was drowning, but Baker could not swim. Miller rose five times before finally disappearing.

"The frantic cries of both men alarmed the other guests fishing some distance away, and in less than half an hour Miller's body was recovered. It was standing upright on the bottom in 8 feet of water.

"When the body was rolled, no water was in the lungs. It is concluded that death was due to heart failure, caused by the unusual exertion of swimming in his clothes in muddy water. Four feet further towards shore he could have stood with his head out.

"Miller had been unusually jovial during the day. He arrived with his wife, little daughter and his wife's parents July 7, and was planning to return next Thursday. He was 51 years old, and leaves a grown son and daughter in St. Louis.

"Baker was nearly exhausted when rescued, but rallied when worked over, and is out of danger. The family left with the body for St. Louis this afternoon.

The St. Louis paper added the following to the above special:

"Miss Grace Miller slept at her home last night, ignorant of the death of her father. She and her brother, John C. Miller, Jr., remained at home while their parents and younger sister, Louise, went on a pleasure trip to Minnesota. Miss Miller has been seriously ill for a week, and friends of the family decided yesterday afternoon to withhold the sad news until today, when the family physician, Dr. H. S. Brooks, will break the news just before her mother and sister return home with the body of her father.

"Friends and others decided that this would be the better course, and last night all precautions were taken to prevent any one seeing Miss Miller who might inadvertently tell her of her father's death.

"Mr. Miller was a Kentuckian, and came to St. Louis thirty-five years ago from Millersburg, Ky. For many years he conducted a merchants' tailoring and draping establishment at the corner of Seventh and Locust streets, and was one of the city's well-known business men. His son, John Clarke Miller, Jr., is associated with his father in business.

Mr. Miller was the son of Mr. John Clarke Miller and Jane McClelland Miller, whose old homestead is the residence now owned and occupied by Mr. Wm. Layson, near Millersburg.

Blue Grass Fair Catalogs.

Copies of the catalog of the big Blue Grass Fair, which will be held at Lexington the week of August 12th to 17th, have been sent to this office for distribution. The catalog is considered by competent judges the most complete ever issued by a fair in Kentucky. It sets forth fully the unequalled prize list of the Blue Grass Fair together with information concerning the splendid program of free attractions and carnival features. The cover is particularly handsome having been made from a special design drawn for the Blue Grass Fair by the eminent artist George Ford Morris, of Chicago.

Any person wishing catalogs can secure same by applying at this office.

Feudist Moves To Paris.

Awed by the continued fear of an assassin's bullet, John Philpot, the last surviving male member of the Philpot family, and son of Granville Philpot, leader of his side in the famous feud of the Philpots, Whites, Bakers, and Eversoles in Eastern Kentucky, has obtained a position with the Louisville & Nashville Railroad as fireman, and will move his family to Paris.

Philpot says he is desirous of living in peace with the world, but the bitterness engendered by the feud in which male members of his family were exterminated still exists, and the constant fear of being shot down induced him to come to Paris with his family.

About Something To Ride In.

We would like to have you come to our repository, examine our vehicles carefully and get our prices before going or sending money to some other point for vehicles. We do not agree to sell any vehicle for $25 to $50 less than it is worth, as some firms advertise, nor do we guarantee goods for an unreasonable time. We do, however, guarantee our goods to be exactly as we represent them, to be worth every dollar we ask for them and we are here to fulfill the guarantee that the factories place upon them. We also agree to furnish any grade of vehicle as cheap or cheaper than that same grade will cost anywhere else. We handle such goods as have proven themselves good and if you buy from us you may rest assured you have the full value of your money. Give us a call.

Scrap In East Paris.

Lindsay Huff and Leonard Wood became involved in a difficulty in East Paris yesterday, resulting in Wood cutting a deep gash in Huff's head with a pair of wire nippers. In the Police Court yesterday afternoon Judge Hinton fined Huff $10, as the proof showed him to be the aggressor.

Nearly Cut In Twain By Barb Wire.

Carl Griggs was horribly cut and mangled yesterday afternoon while assisting in stretching some barbed wire on the farm of Jonas Weil, near town. Mr. Griggs was standing near one end of the wire and a horse was hitched to the other end. The wire snapped and curled itself around Mr. Griggs and a tree he was against. The horse kept going and before he could be stopped the poor man was almost cut in twain.

Dr. Dudley was at once called to the scene and the man was hastened to the St. Joseph Hospital on an interurban car. Hinton's ambulance taking him from Weil's to the car.

Mrs. Martha Arnsperger Dead.

Mrs. Martha Arnsperger died at her home at Newtown, Scott county, Wednesday morning, from the infirmities of old age. She had been in ill health for some time and the recent extremely hot weather prostrated her. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Mrs. Porter Smith, of California, and two sons, James D. Arnsperger, of Lexington, and Attorney Clifton Arnsperger, of this city.

Mrs. Arnsperger was one of Newtown's oldest residents and was much respected and loved by all who knew her. The funeral services took place at her late residence on yesterday afternoon at three o'clock and conducted by Rev. Joseph Severance, assisted by Rev. Horace Kingsbury. Burial in the Georgetown cemetery. The pallbearers were: W. A. Gaines, Dr. A. B. Coons, J. T. Sabel, Dr. B. D. Knox, Dan M. McMillan and S. H. Lucas.

Death Of Mrs. Mayme Roche Lucas.

Mrs. Mayme Roche Lucas, wife of Mr. C. D. Lucas, died at her home on High street at 8:20 o'clock, Wednesday evening of double pneumonia. She is survived by her husband and a three weeks old daughter.

Mrs. Lucas was aged 23 years, and was one of the most popular young women ever raised in Paris. The death of this beautiful young matron has cast a gloom over the entire community.

While death is sad in every case, yet this is particularly sad one, and on every hand kind words of sympathy are heard, being expressed for her family, especially for the sweet little cherub she leaves behind.

Three weeks ago Mrs. Lucas gave birth to a little daughter and for several days her life was despaired of. She, however, began to improve rapidly and was pronounced out of danger when Saturday Mr. Lucas went to Rockford, Ill., to make arrangements to move his family there as soon as his wife's health permitted, he having secured a good position at that place. Pneumonia set in Sunday and Mrs. Lucas became critically ill, her physicians making heroic efforts to prolong her life till the arrival of the 10:58 p. m. train from Cincinnati, Wednesday evening, aboard which was Mr. Lucas, who was hurrying home in response to telegrams informing him of the critical illness of his wife. At the time named above, however, she passed away as peacefully as a babe sweetly sleeping in its mother's arms.

The funeral will take place this (Friday) afternoon, at 4 o'clock, from the residence. Burial at Paris cemetery.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Col. E. F. Clay is reported improving.

—Prof. Hume Bedford is ill with typhoid fever.

—Miss Corine Collins is visiting relatives in Cincinnati.

—Frank Kiser is confined to his bed threatened with typhoid fever.

—Miss Nannie Barbee, of Danville, is the guest of Mrs. J. S. Wilson.

—Miss Mary Joplin, of Mt. Sterling, is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Brooks.

—Miss Stella Roberts, of Lexington, is the guest of Mrs. C. B. Mitchell.

—Mrs. Fannie Hedges remains quite ill at the home of Judge Russell Mann.

—Mrs. F. J. Cheek and children, of Louisville, are guests of Miss Fannie Ingels.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Neely left Wednesday for a week's stay at Olympian Springs.

—Little Hugh Scott, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Scott is ill with typhoid fever.

—Miss Mary Irvine Blanton, of Cynthiana, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. E. M. Dickson.

—Miss Josie Linehan was taken to St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington, Wednesday, for treatment.

—Mrs. Anna Thornton and daughter, Miss Anna Thornton, have returned from Olympian Springs.

—Mrs. Chas. May will entertain at dinner Thursday in honor of Tuesday's bride, Miss Bettie Brent Johnson.

—Mrs. M. H. Dailey will entertain with a linen shower Saturday morning in honor of Miss Bettie Brent Johnson.

—Mrs. Robert Goggin and Miss Clara Bacon will act as judges of the art display in the floral exhibit at the Cynthiana fair.

—Miss Lucile Price and her guest Miss Madeline Herzog, of Cincinnati, left Tuesday for a visit to friends at Winchester.

—Mrs. A. L. Slicer and children are visiting Mrs. Slicer's father, Mr. Amos Jameson, at Greenfield, Ohio, and will remain several weeks.

—Misses Edna and Leslie Turney will entertain with 6 o'clock dinner this evening at the home of Mrs. Amos Turney, near town, in honor of the bride-to-be, Miss Bettie Brent Johnson.

—Mr. and Mrs. John V. Harris have returned to their home in Detroit, after a pleasant stay of several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Erringer, at "Roslyn."

—Miss Elizabeth Brown Huddleston, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Hillsboro, O., for the past month, returned home yesterday after a most pleasant visit.

—Prof. G. W. Chapman and family left yesterday morning for Grenup, Lawrence and Boyd counties. Prof. Chapman will do institute work while gone and his wife and children will visit relatives.

—W. W. Mitchell, Harry Clay, Frank Clay, Sidney G. Clay and Hume Clay left yesterday morning for a fish and hunt at Kagawong, Manitou Island, Canada. They will be joined there by W. R. Blakemore, of Chicago.

—Mrs. Catesby Woodford has gone to Charleston, Va., and will bring her mother, Mrs. Davenport, who has been ill there, to St. Joseph Hospital, at Lexington, for treatment. They were expected to arrive at the hospital yesterday.

—Miss Nannie Louise Best, of Macon, Ga., Miss Mary Boldrick, of Lebanon, and Miss Louise McKee, of Cynthiana, arrived yesterday as guests of Miss Bettie Brent Johnson. The young ladies will be maids at the Johnson-Turney nuptials on Tuesday.

—Mrs. J. H. Butler and daughters, Misses Margaret and Lorine Butler, left yesterday for Olympian Springs. They will be joined next week by Mr. Butler and Miss Ollie Butler, the latter remaining at home to participate in the Johnson-Turney wedding.

—Miss Fannie Ingels has accepted a position as teacher in Caldwell College at Danville. Miss Ingels is considered one of the finest teachers in Bourbon county and her selection to a position in this large school shows good judgment on the part of the board of that college. The new name for this college is to be "The Woman's College of Kentucky," and it will no doubt in a short time be the largest female college in Kentucky.

—Miss Jennie Kenney, who was recently re-elected for the eighth consecutive year as a teacher in the Paris City School, tendered her resignation to the Board of Education Tuesday.

Miss Kenney has accepted a position as teacher in a school at Clatyon, New Mexico, at an advanced salary of what she was receiving here. She is recognized by all as one of our best teachers and patrons of the school together with the host of friends of the young lady regret to learn of her going from our midst. The loss sustained by our school is certainly a gain for the Clatyon school.

—The following from Paris were among the party that left here Tuesday morning over the Interurban road to spend the day at Natural Bridge: Misses Mattie Kiser, Hazel Cottingham, Lyle Jacoby, Willie Lou Jacoby, Lena Whaley, Fairy Templin, Madeline Huddleston, Alma Fightmaster, Sallie Daniel, Sara Grinnan, Margaret Grinnan, Lou Kniffin Howard; Messrs. H. L. Minter, Geo. Kiser, John T. Hinton, Jr., Walter Ratcliff, W. H. Rion, Ben Downey, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McLean, Mrs. Smith Clarke, Mrs. J. T. Pritchard, Mrs. Victor Shipp, Mrs. Ed. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fightmaster. The party from here was under the escort of Dr. W. H. Argabrite and a very enjoyable day was spent.

—Drs. F. H. Clarke and Dr. Norris, of Lexington, entertained a number of physicians at 8 o'clock dinner Wednesday evening at Crosdale's Cafe. The Lexington parties came over in their automobiles. Twelve covers were laid and the following were the guests: Drs. Barrow, Kellie, Carrick, Falconer, McClymonds, Istucky, all of Lexington; Drs. Fithian, Daugherty and Evans, of Paris, and Wm. Muir, the noted automobilist, of Lexington. It is said the dinner was one of the swellest ever set in our city.

—Mrs. C. P. Brown and daughter, Miss Virginia, of Shelbyville, are here for a few days with the former's uncle, James A. Stewart, at Windsor Hotel.

What Mitchell Says:

It has been my policy in the past to make the very best cold drinks and icees that can be made.

My present business is a demonstration of the fact that the people have appreciated my efforts.

I don't claim to make better drinks and better frozen goods than other merchants—I leave that for you to say—but what I do say is this: you can at all times get a Soda, Sundae, Phosphate or any soda fountain drink at my store that is just exactly as it should be.

Just received a large lot of Lyons' and Gudther's fine candies.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea-spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. Catching a Thief.

By JUDSON WELLES.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Mornington scowled at the tiny dish of berries before his plate. Sam, his dusky man, smiled apologetically. "Ahm doin' my bes'," he declared. "Ah shuah would lik to kotch 'em." "Same here," declared Mornington. "You don't suppose that the people next door take them do you, Sam?" Sam shook a knowing head. The young ladies, he declared, could not be guilty of such depredations. Ever since they had moved in they had favored Sam with sunny smiles as they passed his yard on the way to the post-office. Sam was their secret slave. With Mornington it was different. He had resented the appearance of this little colony on the next farm. There were six of them, five girls and an elderly woman, who apparently chaperoned them. Gossip said that they were artists who were spending the summer in the country to sketch, and their daily faring forth with easels and canvases bore out the statement.

Mornington hated artists in general and women artists in particular. He had bought the Torrence farm that he might have quiet, and how could a man have quiet when six chattering women occupied the adjoining farmhouse not 300 feet away?

The strawberry beds had been the last irritation. The previous year he had berries in profusion. This season there were few to be found. The dozen or so in the saucer were all Sam had been able to gather in a day. He was certain that his neighbors raided his garden, and, without announcing his intention to Sam, he rose early the next morning.

The sun had barely risen when he took his place behind the tool house, whence he could command a view of the garden. Presently a slender, girlish figure came hurrying from the other house and entered the plot. Mornington waited until she had filled the pan she carried and was about to go. Then he stepped out with a hail. The girl looked up pleasantly.

"Good morning," she cried. "Won't you have some of our berries?" "I should like some of mine," he said pointedly.

"Do you grow them, too?" she asked. Mornington marveled at her self-possession.

"I grow them," he assented, "or, rather, one of Torrence's men grows them for me. That is as far as I have been able to get this season. I have not eaten many of them."

"We have them every morning," she said briskly. "It's one of the things we moved to the country for, fresh fruit. After being cooped up in studios all season and picking your fruits and vegetables off the dumb waiter it is just heavenly to come out in the garden before breakfast and pick your own berries."

"But don't you think it would be better to find out whose berries you are picking?" he suggested. "Even in the country, property rights obtain."

"These are ours," she declared. "We were very particular in our inquiries." "Yet the garden belongs to me," he insisted, a little shamefacedly. Somehow his triumph was losing its savor. "Then we must have been robbing you all this time," she said, with a face suddenly grown as red as the berries in the pan. "I am very sorry."

"It's all right," he said awkwardly, wondering why he had not noticed before what glorious eyes the girl had. "It is not all right," she said decidedly. "We are not thieves. Please take them. You can send the pan back when you are through."

"Pray accept them with my compliments," he said stupidly. He knew that he was making a fool of himself, and he chafed at the knowledge.

For answer the girl laid the pan on the ground and turned away. Mornington watched her go through the paths to the fence and slip through a broken place. She had the regal bearing of a queen and a face to match. Now he would never have a chance to get acquainted with her, and he suddenly realized that that was the one thing above all others that he most desired. Shamefacedly he picked up the pan and went back to the house to send Sam over with the fruit. Sam regarded him reproachfully when he had told his tale, but the darky went down the road to the next house and, after a long delay, returned without the pan, but he laid a shining half dollar in Mornington's palm.

"De wouldn't take 'em," he explained. "I shuah had 't tak de money."

Mornington flung the money from him with a gesture of disgust and went in to breakfast feeling out of joint with the whole world.

But there was worse yet to come. For in the forenoon Torrence, former owner of the farm, made his appearance with the chaperon from the house next door. With many a "hem" and a "haw" Torrence confessed that finding a chance to clinch the lease of the adjoining farm through the strawberry bed he had told the women that it was a part of the land they had rented. "I honestly meant to speak to you about it, because I knew that you had more berries than you wanted. I was going to pay for what they ate out of the rent," he concluded.

Mornington rose to his feet, and Torrence backed through the door. More than once he had witnessed the city man's hasty temper, and he had no desire for an exhibition.

Mornington watched him go and then turned to Mrs. Surrey.

"I don't know what I can say to you to excuse my conduct," he began. "I missed the breakfast berries and wanted to put a stop to it, but I did not know that Torrence had claimed my berry patch for his own. May I beg that my apology be the freedom of the berry patch? There are plenty for us both. I am not always a bear, so you need not be afraid to gather them."

When he so wished, Mornington could be very charming, and now he was exerting himself to the full. Mrs. Surrey became gracious, and the upshot was that Mornington accepted an invitation to tea, when he might make his apology in person to Nancy Richmond.

So successful was he that the next morning when he went to pick his own berries he lingered to help her fill her pan. The berry season passed all too quickly, but there were other fruits, and soon there was a well trodden path from Mornington's porch to the doorway of Studio farm. He went with the girls on field trips, and in the pleasant summer evenings he took his guitar and spent the evening on their porch.

Nancy remained his favorite, and the day before they were to break up and return to town he volunteered to help pack.

"Come down to the orchard," he suggested to Nancy, "and get some apples to take back. They will help you to think of the old place while they last."

Nancy caught up her sunbonnet. The basket they carried was soon filled with rosy cheeked fruit, but Mornington showed no disposition to return to the house. He leaned against the tree and looked over the strawberry beds.

"I'm going to put up a sign," he said, with a smile, "so that Torrence cannot rent my property or I accuse some one else of theft."

"You were awfully cross that morning," she said, with a reminiscent smile. "I remember I rushed back to the house and declared that I would not stay in the horrid place another day."

"Were you sorry you changed your mind?" he asked softly.

"Not after you found that I was not a thief."

"But you are," he persisted. "You stole my heart."

"I might say the same of you," she declared as he took her hand.

"Set a thief to catch a thief," he quoted. "Have I caught you, dear?"

"I guess you have," she confessed, "though you don't deserve to."

"And next season we will share the strawberries," he declared. "It will be joint ownership then."

She smiled into his eager eyes, and then the sunbonnet eclipsed his face.

About Eyeglasses.

Unfortunately there comes a day in each one's life when the eyes require outside assistance to accomplish their usual results. Many are obliged by slight defects of vision to adopt glasses quite young, even as children, and it is fortunate that science has made such progress in this branch, for there is nothing sadder to see than a blind person. Accidental loss of sight cannot be overcome, but slight defects may now, thanks to the oculist, be generally remedied. The wearing of glasses is a trial from the first to last, although the fitting of the nose glass is reduced to a fine art. Spectacles are the only comfortable and satisfactory sort to wear.

It is better to wear nose glasses without a chain, even at the risk of breaking them, for the chain drags the glasses to one side and frequently weakens the springs. The chain, too, twists itself into intricate knots at inconvenient times and causes a word or two of mild profanity on the part of the wearer. If something must be worn, a cord is better.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Failing Memory.

The memory is the most easily fatigued of all our mental faculties. This would seem almost to follow from the very nature of this faculty. To recall an impression already stored up in the brain necessarily involves effort. Every student knows that after a few hours' work the memory loses its power and further effort becomes unprofitable. It is consistent with this view that the memory is the faculty which first decays with the advance of age. With many persons this enfeeblement sets in before middle life is past. Events known to us in youth, when memory was fresh and strong, can be recalled in old age, while the things that happened yesterday readily slip into oblivion.

Perpetual Motion Cranks.

In the days of the Mayflower the first perpetual motion inventors took out their patents for "Engines which being put in order will cause and maintain their own motions with continuance and without any borrowed force of man, horse, wind, river or brooke," and in the last century they have applied for about 600 patents which are based chiefly on the force of gravity, loss of equilibrium, specific gravity of floats and weights immersed in water or other liquid, accession of receptacles inflated with air or gas under water, compression and subsequent expansion of gases and of the surface tension of liquids. So sanguinely hopeful are these ingenious designers that in many cases they provide brakes to stop their machines if necessary or to prevent any dangerous increase of speed. The care and thought expended on the principle and detail of many of the inventions demonstrate that many men of mental ability cling to the idea that perpetual motion is possible and that they themselves are successfully solving the problem.

How to Shoot a Rattler.

The writer once saw an Indian kill a rattlesnake in a very peculiar manner. The rattler was about ten feet from the Indian, who was resting the rifle on his knee, apparently taking aim. Whenever he moved the weapon a few inches the snake would move around and get exactly in line with it. Then, to show how the thing was done, the Indian moved about the snake in a circle, and the reptile moved as if its tail were on a pivot, always keeping its head and body in line with the gun. The Indian then agreed to bandage his eyes and shoot the snake in the mouth. The writer bandaged the Indian's eyes, and, holding the gun by his side at arm's length, the latter pulled the trigger, and the ball entered the snake's mouth and passed the whole length of its body. "How do you take aim?" was the query. "The snake, he takes aim," was the reply. We have talked with an old hunter on this proposition, and he claims that a rattlesnake will always range directly in line with a gun or stick pointed at it.—Exchange.

Snakes as War Weapons.

When Hannibal, the great Carthaginian, was fighting Eumenes of Pergamos with a fleet of very inferior strength he hit upon an artifice which would scarcely be sanctioned by the laws of what we are pleased to call civilized warfare. He discovered by means of a bogus message under a flag of truce on which ship the king was. He then caused poisonous snakes to be inclosed in earthen jars. These he distributed among several slips and ordered them to close up on the king's galley. In the melee that followed the jars were flung on to the deck. The curious bombs were greeted at first with ridicule, which soon changed to panic when the nature of their contents made itself manifest. The galley was extricated from the fight as soon as possible, and the captains of the others, believing that the king had taken flight, followed suit, with the result that Hannibal gained a complete victory.

Cats as Retrievers.

"It is claimed," said a Chicago antiquary, "that cats may be trained as retrievers—trained to swim to your slain birds and bring them back to you in their mouths. The thing sounds incredible, but look here."

He held up the photograph of an ancient Egyptian painting. Men with spears rode on the Nile. In some of the boats large cats sat on their haunches in the stern, while toward others several cats swam with dead birds in their mouths.

"This picture," said the antiquary, "proves that the Egyptians used cats for hunting dogs. If they, why not we? The original of the picture is in the British museum, where there are also several pieces of carving that display the cat in the role of a retriever."

The German and the Fatherland.

A German always remains a German. He respects and loves his fatherland, although isolated and separated from it by boundless oceans and vast continents. A German heart always remains true to the country where it first commenced to beat until it is silenced by death. As a rule, to which there are few exceptions, a man who is loyal to the country of his birth will be loyal to the country of his adoption.—Dr. Nicholas Senn.

Niagara.

Niagara is a corruption of the Seneca word "neagara," meaning "across the neck," an allusion to a strip of land between the lakes. The name has been subjected to many changes since the discovery of the cataract, more than thirty different readings being found in the writings of the various early explorers and geographers.

What He Would Do.

Grandpapa—Tommy, Tommy, you aren't behaving well. Do you know what I should do if I were a little boy like you? Tommy—Yes, grandpapa, you'd do the same as I do, 'cause if you didn't you wouldn't be a little boy like me.

The Universe.

Asks a Good Deal.

"How about the rent of this house of yours, Flitter? Doesn't the landlord ask a good deal for it?" Flitter—Yes. He often asks five and six times a month for it.

The kangaroo readily jumps from sixty to seventy feet. The highest recorded leap of a horse is thirty-seven feet.

ANCIENT TRADES UNION.

The Company of Pewterers, Which Was Composed of Masters Only.

Unlike the trades unions of today, the Company of Pewterers of olden times was composed of the masters only, and disobedience of the rules was punished with a vigor far exceeding anything of the kind at the present day. The laws were made for the protection of the general public and not for the workman alone; consequently the articles turned out by a master pewterer and bearing his "touch" had to be up to a given standard of excellence. Before a man could set up as a master pewterer he was obliged to serve an apprenticeship of about six years, after which he had to produce his "essay" pieces under certain test conditions, and only after these pieces had been approved by the authorities of the craft was he allowed his freedom and permitted to register his private "touch" at the company's hall and set up as a master pewterer.

The company was not content merely to pass upon the work of a craftsman, but came very near regulating the minor details of his life. The penalty was very heavy for employing a helper who had not served a regular apprenticeship, and any master so daring as to employ a foreigner was fined £10, and all articles made by him were confiscated, the object being to keep the trade secrets from spreading.—Circle Magazine.

CONFECTIONERY.

The Sugar Plum Is the Most Ancient Kind of Sweetmeat.

The most ancient kind of sweetmeat is the sugar plum. It was the invention of Julius Dragatus, a noted Roman baker and confectioner, who belonged to the family of Fabius. According to an authority on ancient history, it was in 177 B. C. that he made the great discovery which for twenty centuries has done so much damage to teeth.

These bonbons, called dragati, after their inventor (dragates in French), remained the exclusive privilege of the family of Fabius. But at the birth or marriage of one of that family a great distribution of dragati took place as a sign of rejoicing. The custom is still observed by many of the nobility of Europe.

Burned almonds are purely of French origin, owing their inception to the gluttony of a certain French merchant. One day Marshal Duplessis-Pralin, an old gourmet, sent for Lassagne, who had already invented many a toothsome dainty, to concoct a new bonbon for him. Lassagne searched, reflected, combined, until finally he conceived a delicious bonbon, which he baptised gloriously after the name of his master, praline, the French for burned almonds.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Old Time Stagecoach.

In 1762 there were, strange as it seems, only six stagecoaches running in all England, and of course these were the only public vehicles for travelers. Even these were a novelty, and a person named John Crosset thought that he wrote a pamphlet against them. "These coaches," he wrote, "make gentlemen come to London upon every small occasion, which otherwise they would not do except upon urgent necessity. Nay, the convenience of the passage makes their wives come often up, who rather than come such long journeys on horseback would stay at home. Then when they come to town they must be in the wade, get fine clothes, go to plays and treats and by these means get such a habit of idleness and love of pleasure that they are uneasy after."

The Chameleon Goshawk.

I know no bird which passes through so many changes of plumage and color of eyes as the goshawk. A young one which I have mounted is about the size of a small hen and is covered with white down. His eyes are pale blue. I colored the eyes exactly from life. When fully grown, the first plumage is dark brown above and the eyes are pale yellow. No one would be likely to suspect this being a goshawk who had seen only adult birds. Later it changes to the dark slaty blue of the adult, and the eye, after passing through all the intermediate changes in color from straw yellow, orange yellow and pink, finally assumes the deep red of the adult. I know no other hawk, adds Manly Hardy, writing in Forest and Stream, so handsome as the goshawk.

The Letter G.

The letter G furnishes us a curious bit of orientalism. Its Hebrew name is gimel, camel, from the resemblance of the Hebrew character to the head and neck of that animal. The character was thus almost certainly derived from a picture of that animal, which, reduced to a hieroglyphic and then simplified, still distinctly indicates the shape of the head and neck of the beast of burden familiar to every dweller in eastern lands.

Infantile Chicken Broth.

Customer—What on earth is this broth made of, waiter? Surely it isn't chicken broth? Waiter—Well, sir, it's chicken broth in its infancy. It's made out of the water that the eggs are boiled in.

GRAVITATION.

Its Wonderful and Far Reaching Effects Upon the World.

"The effects of gravitation are so familiar as to demand only the briefest mention, yet most of us perhaps seldom stop to consider how far reaching these effects are," says Dr. Henry Smith Williams. "But for gravitation the winds would not blow, the waters would not descend, and the mountain tops would not crumble into the valleys. Each particle of pulverized rock would remain where it was formed, and there would be no such thing as a mixed soil."

"But as matters are actually arranged gravitation is perpetually active, and every particle of matter is being eternally tugged at and urged to get nearer to the earth's center. So no sooner does a fragment of rock at a mountain crest become loosened than gravitation hurries it crashing down into the valley, shattering it into fragments perhaps or at the least grinding off some portions of its surface as well as of the surface of the rocks against which it is dashed."

"By such means and with the further aid of its handmaidens, wind and water, gravitation works its unceasing purpose of leveling the surface of the earth. In a few brief geological moments it rounds the shoulders of the haughtiest mountain, and, given time enough, it will bring every particle of rock back to the sea bed, whence it originally sprang. Short of that, as a transition stage, it is forever mixing the different soil constituents on the one hand and sorting them out again on the other."—Appleton's.

FINE SPIDER THREADS.

Cultivated Especially For the Use of Astronomers.

The cultivation of certain species of spiders solely for the fine threads which they weave for scientific uses has an important bearing upon astronomy.

No substitute for the spider's thread has yet been found for bisecting the screw of the micrometer used for determining the positions and motions of the stars. Not only because of the remarkable fineness of the threads are they valuable, but because of their durable qualities.

The threads of certain spiders raised for astronomical purposes withstand changes in temperatures, so that often in measuring sun spots they are uninjured when the heat is so great that the lenses of the micrometer eyepiece are cracked.

These spider lines are only one-fifth to one-seventh of a thousandth of an inch in diameter, compared with which the threads of the silkworm are large and clumsy.

Each line is made up of several thousands of microscopic streams of fluid. Under the most powerful magnifying glass they appear true and round.

The work of placing these lines in the micrometer requires the delicate touch of experts, who operate with the aid of microscopes which magnify the line a thousand times. The lines are placed parallel with each other and two one-thousandths of an inch apart. —Stray Stories.

Buying Cooked Food.

In France it is a common thing for the wife to be out at work as well as the husband. From this circumstance, no doubt, have developed the facilities that country affords for obtaining ready cooked food outside the home. Whole meals can be purchased outside, and they are very good meals too. A whole fowl or a half one or a smaller portion can be bought hot or cold from the rotisser. Soups and salads can be bought in the same way, and in shops where eggs are sold there is always a basket of red eggs as well as white ones, the red color being used to indicate that the eggs are cooked. All these things are sold at prices "within the reach of all," and in many homes scarcely any attempt is made to do cooking.

Belgium Blows Its Horn.

Belgium, like many continental countries, has its national board of advertising. The state, owning, as it does, the railways, must do everything in its power to increase the passenger traffic, and so England and the adjacent countries are extensively placarded with posters showing Belgium's beauty and pleasure spots. The principal attractions are Ostend and its casino, and the pictorial records of this resort have adorned the boardings of England for many years past.—London Graphic.

Chileans Are Mongrels.

There is a good deal of mongrel about Chilean society. Chileans will tell you that they are descended from old Spanish families, but the old Spanish families were mostly turned out or massacred in the revolution against Spain, which arose mainly out of the wrongs of the mongrels. The descent, in short, usually includes a slave native Indian woman years back, and the two types have mixed well, with handsome but very fiery results.—Exchange.

IRRESISTIBLE SLEEP.

An Experience In The Fierce Cold of Tierra del Fuego.

"Whoever sits down," said Dr. Solander to his company among the hills of Tierra del Fuego, "will sleep, and whoever sleeps will wake no more." The brave doctor and his men had tramped a considerable distance through the swamps, when the weather became suddenly colder and fierce blasts of wind drove the snow before it. In a short time the cold became so intense as to cause the most oppressive drowsiness. Dr. Solander was the first to find the inclination to sleep, and he insisted upon lying down. In vain his companions entreated and remonstrated. He lay down, and when told that he would inevitably freeze to death answered that he desired nothing more than to lie down and die. One of the black servants lay down also. Solander declared himself willing to go on, but begged to be allowed to sleep first, and in a few moments the two men were in a profound sleep. Soon after, those who had been sent forward to kindle a fire returned with the welcome news that the fire awaited them at a short distance. The men happily succeeded in awakening Solander, who, although he had not been asleep five minutes, had almost lost the use of his limbs, and the flesh was so shrunken that his shoes fell from his feet. It was with much urging and assistance that he consented to go on, but all attempts to arouse the black man were futile, and he was left to die.

HE WANTED REST.

What Verdi Did With the Key of a Locked Piano.

Not all the great composers have courted the constant adulation of the world. Verdi used to lament that he was unable to find a refuge, even for a brief space, from the reputation that preceded him wherever he went.

At one time he desired to spend a much needed holiday at the watering place of Montecatini. When he arrived, he found that in one of the apartments assigned to him stood a grand piano of noted make. On the rack, by way of compliment, lay the score of "Il Trovatore." As soon as he caught sight of it the veteran flew into a rage, hastily locked the instrument, threw the score into a corner and, calling for his host, demanded in tragic tones: "Lead me to the spot that overhangs the steepest precipice!"

Wondering, the host did as he was bidden, and on reaching the summit the maestro, who was almost exhausted from fatigue, flung the key of the piano into the abyss, energetically exclaiming as he did so:

"Now I have done something to secure rest and quiet. On the day of my departure I shall send a locksmith to provide the piano with a new key, but while I am here I pray you let it remain as it is."—New York Tribune.

His Grace.

Little Milly is a good Sunday school scholar and on that account was invited with two or three others to spend the day at the minister's residence by way of reward. When the dinner came on the good man said such a long grace before meat that Milly yawned and looked hungrily at the covers.

"Why are you yawning, Milly?" asked the minister. "Does not your father say grace?"

"Oh, yes," answered Milly promptly, "but it isn't so long as that."

"And what does he say?" pursued the clergyman, hoping to obtain a text for a little homily.

"He says different things, but last time when he sat down he took off the cover and said: 'Great snakes! Do you call this a dinner?'"

The homily was postponed.—Strand Magazine.

The Wrong Shop.

He was only a plain American panhandler, says the New York Globe, but he ordered his "schooner" of Bowery beer with the sang froid of a plain American plutocrat. Midway in its consumption he sidled to the free lunch counter and reduced the pile of big sausages by one.

Two more gulps of beer and a second and third large sausage disappeared. Washing these down, he concluded that he needed a sausage and got it; then for the door.

"Here, Bill," the genial barkeeper called familiarly. "Come back a minute."

The panhandler returned expectantly. "Say, Bill," the barkeeper continued in a confidential way, "the next time you want a glass of beer you go to a butcher shop, see?"

Shock to the Waiter.

There was a terrible commotion in the kitchen of the cafe. They could see it through the swinging doors. Some one went to investigate.

"What is it?" they asked when he had returned.

"A waiter fainted," he answered as he took his seat. "They are slapping him with wet towels, trying to bring him to. Did you see that woman who just left? She was the cause. She gave him a quarter tip."—New York Press.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better. In fact, the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms and insuring comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down, debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Wonderfully Made.

A clergyman happened to tell his son what lesson he would read in church the next morning. The boy got his father's Bible, found the lesson place and glued together the connecting pages. In consequence the clergyman read to his son the following day that Noah was 120 years old he took himself a wife who was (here he turned the page) 140 cubits long, 40 cubits wide, built of gopher wood, and covered with pitch in and out. After reading the passage, the clergyman read at again to verify it, then pushing his spectacles he looked gravely and said: "My friends, this is the first time I ever read that in the Bible, but I accept it as evidence of the assertion that we are fearfully and wonderfully made."

Good For Arkansas.

Arkansas is one of the States that has entered upon a vigorous crusade against the use of concealed weapons, and the fact is much to her credit. The governor has just signed a bill enacted by the legislature which imposes a fine of $100 to $1,000 and imprisonment for one year on anyone guilty of drawing a knife or pistol. St. Joseph, Mo., is a town which is also determined to put a stop to such practices. The commissioner of police offers liberal rewards to men who make the most arrests and who secure the greatest number of convictions of "gun toters." These are wholesome examples, says Troy Times, and might be widely imitated to the advantage of the public and to the lessening of crime.

If you want to hear a strong anti-trust speech, get an agricultural implement dealer started who handles anti-trust goods.

The Army and Church Attendance

So sharp is the line between church and state in this country that the war department has lately decided that an army post commander exceeded his power when he ordered a non-commissioned officer to attend church. The department has declared that those soldiers who voluntarily attend services may be ordered to form in line and march to chapel decently and in military order, but that the authority of the commander stops there.

The Law.

Thou shalt worship the Almighty Dollar with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy might. This is the first and great commandment; and the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor less than his money. On these two commandments hang all the "law" and its profits.—Ex.

Not Labor Lost.

The safe bore a paper stating that there was nothing of value within. Nevertheless, the burglar blew the receptacle open, finding the statement correct. "Well," he remarked, gathering up his tools, "it's worth something to ascertain that there are still people who tell the truth."

Caught With The Goods.

The Union Pacific railroad will have to surrender to the government many thousands of acres of coal lands in the west which it has fraudulently acquired. Mr. Harriman and the railroad magnates are entitled to no thanks for this restitution, for their fraudulent title was discovered by the investigation of the interstate commerce commission.

The Average Jap.

Speaking of the visit of the 700 Japanese sailors from the visiting warships who came ashore and returned without one of them getting drunk, deserting or engaging in disorder of any kind, and who visited Columbia University instead of the Bowery, the New York World remarks that they "not only violated all the traditions of a seafaring town, but they gave New York its first real lesson as to what the average Japanese man who does things is like." And perhaps helps to explain to some extent how it is he does them.
